

We switched our ISP from PacBell (now SBC) because of poor and interrupted service from PacBell. We have not only recieved excellent and reliable service from Sonic.Net, we are able to get valuable technical support, on demand, by voice from highly talented and knowledgeable personnel.

It is crucial that these large carriers, on whom smaller independent providers such as Sonic.Net depend for connectivity, continue to be regulated on their pricing and service to the independents. It is fatuous to claim that deregulating these large carriers would not constitute a threat to the smaller independents. They are the 800 pound gorillas who can and will squash the independents if they are not regulated.
